Washington State Transactions

November Highlights

HIGHLIGHTS

- Seattle startup Viome raised $36.4 M of a larger $105 M round, following a previous raise of $25M completed in April 2019. Viome completes an in-depth microbiome analysis using customer’s stool samples then provides a personalized food and supplement plan based on the results. (Geekwire)
- The University of Washington, UC Berkeley, and UC San Francisco are launching the Weill Neurohub, funded with a $106M donation from the Weill Family Foundation. The Weill Neurohub will bring together professionals from both scientific and technical disciplines to couple the traditional scope of neuroscience with data science and engineering to revolutionize diagnosis, treatment and management of neurological and psychological disorders. In addition to the academic investment, the Neurohub will leverage expertise and resources of 17 National Laboratories managed by the US Department of Energy. (Geekwire, BioSpace)
- KitoTech Medical raised $1.5M to fund development of its microMend wound closure device, which is applied over a cut similar to a traditional butterfly bandage. microMend can be applied by anyone, whereas traditional sutures must be performed by a skilled professional. (Geekwire)
- Immunexpress, Inc. announced the US Patent and Trademark Office has granted a patent covering the differentiation of gram-positive and gram-negative sepsis-causing bacteria. Immunexpress’ technology, SeptID, can accurately determine Gram stain status from a whole blood sample containing a microbe from a sepsis patient in approximately one hour. (BioSpace)
